Vision:

“To create a better life for all by promoting inclusion and combating discrimination connected to mental illness.”

Mission:

 ✓ To increase public knowledge on mental illness
 ✓ To reduce the distance that leads to stigma, prejudice and social exclusion
 ✓ To increase greater understanding of mental illness in schools, workplaces and all other spheres of everyday life.

One of five defined target areas:

Psychiatric, health and social service staff - objectives

- More respect and cooperation in practice – policies are not enough
- More knowledge on recovery and empowerment
- Recognise resources of service users and relatives and promote a holistic approach
- Stimulate greater reflection on culture and language within systems
Background and data

A basic challenge

Prejudice on mental illness and people affected by it can cause:

• Rejection and exclusion from society

• Self-stigma leading to loss of relations, loneliness and low self-esteem

• Lack of acceptance of illness and of motivation to cooperate on treatment
The significance of culture

• Mental health professionals’ perception of a patient’s possibility of recovery has a significant impact on the level of stigma.

• The tone on the ward and the way staff talk about patients affect mental health professionals’ perception of recovery possibilities.
  (ONE OF US, 2011-2012)

• Voicing prejudice: In a survey among 500 young people with lived experience, 70% stated that mental health professionals had not talked to them about prejudice
  (ONE OF US, 2013)
"It does help when practitioners believe it is possible to get better. It helps both the patients and the practitioners. It is of course more important for patients. But it generates a different energy and enthusiasm when both parties believe in it. You don’t have to apologise for believing in your patient all the time saying: 'Well, I know I might be seeing this through rose-coloured glasses.'"

"'Naive’, we usually say or 'Okay, I guess you haven’t been here that long’. It’s devastating to be told just because you see resources. But when we work with patients on the cognitive model it shines through, if we don’t believe what we say. We have to believe what we say.”

Focus group to item 20, mixed staff
Stigma in every day life - examples

- Patients feel patronized

- Patients do not feel sufficiently involved in decisions about own treatment

- Lack of focus on patients resources and possibility of recovery - ‘once mentally ill, always mentally ill’

Of course we can help you ...
A patient’s perspective

"But when I got this diagnosis [schizophrenia] and we left the psychiatrist, I said ’I don’t have schizophrenia’. She [health professional/contact person] looks at me and says: ’So listen, you have schizophrenia. You’ll need medication for the rest of your life, you won’t be able to work’ - I would have to apply for early retirement pension – ’You won’t have children and you won’t marry. But you can still have a good life.’”

Focus group, ONE OF US, discrimination survey 2013
Stigma not just a Danish phenomenon

International data document:

• Up to one fourth of all experiences of stigma occur inside the mental health system
  (Thornicroft, 2006)

Danish data document:

• Patients feel stigmatized by mental health professionals
  (DSI 2010, ONE OF US 2011-2012)

• Mental health professionals in general are more pessimistic than the general public on whether or not it is possible to recover from mental illness.
  (Nordentoft et al. 2011)
Survey among young people 2013

Does your doctor/therapist discuss prejudices with you?

- Yes: 24%
- No: 70%
- Don't know: 7%

ONE OF US’ survey on mental illness among young people and their attitudes towards and experience with treatment. 573 respondents between 15 and 25 yrs. w. lived experience of mental illness.
A Danish pilot study among staff in two psychiatric wards in Copenhagen 2011-12

Aim of survey:

• Measure attitudes among psychiatric staff in a pilot study to test the assumption that psychiatric staff are more likely to stigmatize than the population in general.

• Stimulate debate and reflection about stigma-related issues among staff
18. The tone at the workplace and the way we speak about patients affect our perception of their possibility of recovery.

Attitudes survey
Added item: Cultural sensitivity
Attitudes survey
Verbal and non-verbal communication

"What you say verbally is one thing, but there can also be stigmatising body language and attitudes. Even at a medical conference. When certain diagnoses come up, some of the staff members already roll their eyes. There are many ways to be unprofessional. The attitude is: 'You’ll never get anywhere with them', 'they’re always so difficult'. They distance themselves and don’t take it seriously."

The Tool Kit

Challenges

Psychiatric staff have knowledge about mental illness and contact with patients but stigma still exists.

→ stimulate a process of reflection on culture and bring about the messages of:

1. Seeing 'the person behind the diagnosis'
2. Recognising the importance of the patients’ first encounter with the psychiatric system.

Strength

Psychiatric management level – both national and regional - represented in the partnership of ONE OF US

→ backing the need for targeting psychiatric staff
Aim of the toolkit: The Dialogue Kickstarter

- To create awareness of communication
- To motivate staff to a dialogue about respectful language and awareness of culture and social conventions
- To stimulate that staff work more goal-oriented to promote anti-stigma.

Translation:
The Dialogue Kickstarter – put focus on anti-stigma
The Dialogue Kickstarter – a good starting point

The Dialogue Kickstarter allows for:

• Mutual reflections on the impact of prejudice, stigma and self-stigma in order to strengthen the quality of treatment to the benefit of patients and their relatives

• Strengthening cross-cutting dialogue between professionals to increase awareness of language and culture in the everyday treatment effort

• Strengthen readiness to an open dialogue with patients and relatives on taboo, prejudice and the risk of self-stigma

The educational setting – easy access and use

• Easily accessible and easy to administer

• Different levels/steps: 1, 2 or 3 hours (+ extra 1 hour)
  - with step by step instructions

• Provides an opportunity to include service users and relatives (defined goal)

• Identification as strongest means:
  Personal stories by ambassadors (in person)
  Personal stories by ambassadors on video
  Case vignettes related to every day life within mental health care
Information material – poster and postcard
Information material
– stickers with messages to remember

- No one is just a diagnosis
- Have you asked your patient for his or her opinion?
- Hope is always part of recovery
- Have you asked your patient for his or her experiences of prejudice?
Video:

’Don’t ask questions all the time’
Video: ’I shouldn’t ask too many questions’

Questions for debate:

• Do you recognise any of the described situations?

• Have you experienced other situations where patients have felt stigmatized? What happened, and could you have done anything differently?

• Have you experienced relatives feeling stigmatised? What happened, and could you have done anything differently?

In the video we learn how patients feel stigmatised by the glass wall.

• What is your conference culture like?

• Is there anything that could be done differently and if so, how?

In the video we also learn that the first encounter with the psychiatric system is vital.

• Which values do you emphasise when you meet patients. Is there room for improvement and perhaps a more systematic approach in your daily practice?
Case example: On parenthood

Dorte is 25 years old and diagnosed with schizophrenia. She is at her final appointment with her psychiatrist, Pernille, and contact nurse, Henriette, in outpatient treatment. She has been through a long treatment plan which she has benefitted greatly from and now reports to be without symptoms.

During treatment she has talked about neglect in her childhood and her wild teens with many different boyfriends. She is studying to become a kindergarten teacher and for the first time in her life she is in a longterm relationship with Asger who has a 5-year-old daughter from a previous relationship.

The conversation ends with Dorte sharing her and Asger’s hope of having a child together and becoming ’a real family’. Both Pernille and Henriette tell Dorte that she should really think it over thoroughly because ’having a baby is a huge challenge’.

Debate questions:
• How would you react to Dorte’s wish to have a baby?
• Have you ever been in a similar situation? How did you deal with it? How do you think Pernille and Henriette should respond?
