Key challenges and opportunities
- at organisational level

- Vital condition: Establishing a culture based on lived experience and professionalism combined with openness, curiosity, flexibility and ambition

- Many different partners → challenge for all to maintain focus on anti-stigma, the common vision and mission

- Cultural adaptation required when collecting inspiration from anti-stigma efforts in other countries

- Complex economy: A mixture of real money, indirect manpower and user organisations’ voluntary manpower requires realistic and binding agreements

- Realistic attitude throughout the organisation that changing attitudes and behaviour takes time

- Defining relevant and realistic criteria for success and meaningful documentation and evaluation tools of sustainable changes
Key challenges and opportunities
- Means and methods

• Important to have objectives, target groups and plans but also to be flexible and seize the moment
• A common understanding of what works and what doesn’t in anti-stigma work and stay informed
• Social contact activities involving ambassadors w. lived experience has great effect
• Training and maintenance of ambassadors very important → stimulates motivation and empowerment
• A national campaign identity demonstrates society’s support for the cause and open up doors and form the backdrop for the social contact activities
• Important that the PR bureau can grasp the soul and tone of an anti-stigma campaign
• Providing a community via social media and panel surveys
• Networking, ambushing and strategic collaborations saves money and increases possibility of implementation - individuals can play a vital role opening up doors!
